291	Modes and functions of sublimation	Muller, John P.	4/14/1999	tape is listed as missing in OPAC Summary: This paper attempts to make sense of the varying conceptions of sublimation in psychoanalysis by organizing these conceptions according to Gedo and Goldberg's hierarchical model. The model's five modes of functioning offer a framework in which sublimation functions to render what in the person is pre-subjective, archaic, infantile, undifferentiated and mute into complex spatial, visual, motoric, sonorous, or verbal articulation so that a specific psychic condition, corresponding to each of the modes, can be sustained (e.g., differentiation, coherence, relatedness, gratification, self-transcendence) [from the April 1999 scientific program]. Subject: sublimation Add. Author: Diane O'Donoghue (discussant). Add. Deutsch Prize Presentation: April 14, 1999

295	A psychoanalytic perspective on attention-deficit/hyperactivity disorder	Gilmore, Karen	5/26/1999	tape is listed as missing in OPAC Clarkson, Bayard, Jr. (discussant) Beata Rank LectureSummary: Psychoanalysts have tended to view the diagnosis of AD/HD either with skepticism or as a contraindication to psychoanalytic treatment. Dr. Karen Gilmore reviews the history of this puzzling diagnostic entity, which is estimated to account for up to 50% of child referrals, and suggests that a psychoanalytic perspective of the underlying disturbance in ego functioning helps to clarify the nature of the symptom picture. Regardless of etiology (which can be multiple), she suggests that psychoanalytic treatment, most often in conjunction with psychopharmacological therapy, can address the core disturbance in ego integration that creates the familiar triad of inattention, impulsivity, and hyperactivity.

296	Ego psychology and contemporary structural theory	Blum, Harold P,	9/24/1999	tape is listed as missing in OPAC Structural theory Ego psychology Summary: Ego psychology had been a theoretical development against and beyond Id psychology, though a misnomer for structural theory. As an idealized theory and technique ego psychology was eventually followed by devaluation. However, refinements of structural theory have continued to be considered in historical context.

297	Feminization of the female Oedipus complex :	Holtzman, Deanna, and Kulish, Nancy	10/16/1999	tape is listed as missing in OPAC Part I: Separation issues Subject: Oedipal complex. Summary: The authors argue that "the female Oedipal complex" is an oxymoron and propose that it be named "the Persephone complex" after the Greek myth of Persephone, who seems to capture better the typical situation of the little girl. With the use of clinical material, the authors demonstrate that the frequent appearance of separation material linked to triangular, heterosexual competitive fantasies can and should be differentiated from material in which ideas about separation are more closely tied to dyadic and other earlier issues. A misapprehension of these separation conflicts tied to triangular relationships can lead to "pre-Oedipalization" of the dynamics of girls and women (from the 10/99 BPSI program calendar).

298	Conflict of goals in psychoanalysis	Spilius, Elizabeth Bott, and Jacobs, Daniel H	10/27/1999	tape is listed as missing in OPAC Summary: ". . .the most successful cases are those in which one proceeds, as it were, without any purpose in view, allows oneself to be taken by surprise by any new turn in them and always meets them with an open mind, free from any presuppositions. . ." (Freud, 1912). ". . .those who believe that the aim of the psychoanalytic method is no more and no less than to analyse are deceiving themselves, and . . .all analysts are affected in their work by therapeutic aims, whether they know it or not." (Sandler and Dreher, 1996). The purpose of this program is to explore the varying perceptions of goals in psychoanalysis - the differences and the ways they converge and their effects in clinical practice (from the 10/99 BPSI program calendar).

299	Too hot to handle: Containing and symbolizing erotic overstimulation in the realm of transgressive and the traumatic	Davies, Jody Messler	11/20/1999	tape is listed as missing in OPAC Subject: Erotic transference Summary: Continuing her work on the complexities of working with the erotic transference in the psychoanalytic relationship, the author will discuss new developments in her thinking pertaining to why the termination phase, in particular, is conducive to working with erotic processes within the analytic relationship. This paper will also touch upon new ways of conceptualizing the developmental passage from infantile to adult sexuality and the ways in which these developmental processes might inform the clinical choices we make with regard to erotic transference and countertransference (from 11/99 BPSI program calendar).

300	Group psychology and psychoanalysis	Caper, Robert Howard Bernard Levine, Edelstein,	1/22/2000	tape is listed as missing in OPAC Subject: Group psychology. Group psychoanalysis. Add. Author: Levine, Howard (discussant); Edelstein, Bernard (case presentation). Summary: In this paper, Dr. Caper begins with Freud's observation that we cannot fully understand the psychology of the individual without taking into account the mental life of the group to which the individual belongs, and goes on to examine the clinical psychoanalytic dyad as a "Group of Two". He describes the pressures that patient and analyst exert on each other to achieve a kind of group homogeneity through identification with one another, and how this mutual identification may be used for both analytic and anti-analytic purposes. Finally, he considers the emotional difficulties for the analyst in working under these pressures, and briefly comments on the implications of this paper for our understanding of what constitutes a good analytic relationship [from 1/00 BPSI program calendar].

The focus of the talk is on how Freud's early concepts of trauma were interpreted and put into practice by Dr. Louisvill E. Emerson.
