57 Boxes (55 manuscript, 2 photo boxes)

Processed by: Jessica Steytler

Completed March, 2000;

Rev. 2006-2007, by Olga Umansky

Acquisition Note:

Ives Hendrick's family donated this collection after Hendrick died in 1972. The collection was kept in BPSI storage until the archivist processed it in 1999 and 2000.

November 2006 Addition: Sanford Gifford, M.D. brought additional Ives Hendrick's materials including over 50 photographs dating back to 1950-1960s. The Ives Hendrick's photo box has been established (see Box 56 of Series IX Photographs).

January 2007 Addition: William C. Ackerly, M.D. donated about 40 letters and copies exchanged between Ives Hendrick, M.D. (1898-1972) in Boston, MA and S. Spafford Ackerly, M.D. (1895-1981) in Louisville, KY dating back to 1933-1943. The correspondence has been found in Spaff's personal files by his daughter, Carita Ackerly Warner and sent to his son William C. Ackerly, M.D. in Boston 2007. The letters have been filed in Box 1 of Series I: Professional Correspondence, under S. Spafford Ackerly's name.

June 2007 Addition: address given by Dr. Leston Havens at Ives Hendrick's memorial service, 1972 and Ives Hendrick's will (copy), 1972 have been added to Box 58 (Series X: Biographical Materials).

Access:

All researchers must consult the Institution's archivist, the librarian, or the library director before any access is granted.

Copyright:

The Boston Psychoanalytic Society and Institute holds the copyright to all material within this collection. Anyone who wishes to obtain material from this collection should consult the BPSI archivist or Librarian.

Scope and Content:

These records were compiled and kept by Ives Hendrick (I.H.) throughout his life. The majority of the collection consists of correspondence: professional, general, and personal. There are also teaching records, manuscripts and reprints (written by I.H.), professional organization records, research, and some photographs. For a more thorough description of the series, see "Summary of Contents."

The earliest papers are in the personal correspondence series; they date back to 1902. There were a few files of correspondence between Hendrick's daughter, Jane and Sanford Gifford; these go up to 1976.

Biography

Ives Hendrick (I.H.) was the first child, born to Bertha and Burton Hendrick in 1898 in New Haven, Connecticut. He had a brother, Hobart, born four years later in 1902. The name Ives was his mother's maiden name.

I.H. had an ironically close relationship with his mother, considering his chosen profession. Some who knew her described her as autocratic, critical, and demanding. She and her son would remain close until her death in 1965, writing letters back and forth almost daily. In fact, after Bertha Hendrick died, I.H. collected the letters he had written to his mother over the years and stored them in his files. He did the same with those he had written to his father when Burton died.

Epilepsy and gastrointestinal problems were primary determinants in I.H.'s life. Because of epilepsy, I.H. could not be a practicing medical doctor, as he had originally planned. The gastrointestinal problem, non-healing fecal fistula, was very painful and naturally affected I.H.'s day to day routine, his moods, and his goals.

Because of his ill health, Hendrick was excused from service in World War I. Instead, Hendrick finished boarding school and entered Catholic University in 1918 where he prepared for his college-boards. He was admitted as a sophomore to Yale, where he studied pre-medical courses. In 1923, I.H. was admitted into Yale's medical school. He graduated from Yale in 1925.

During his time at Yale, Hendrick was engaged to a young woman, Margaret McFarland. While the engagement did not last, I.H. kept much of her correspondence from when they were together.

Hendrick began his professional career as a medical service house-officer in New York at Lennox Hill Hospital under the chief resident, Carl Reich. He did not stay long. By 1926, he had moved to Boston to work at the Boston Psychopathic Hospital. This, too, did not last long. Dr. Chapman of the Sheppard and Enoch Pratt hospital in Baltimore, MD persuaded Hendrick to join the medical staff. I.H. stayed in Baltimore from 1927 until 1928.

In August 1928, I.H. traveled to Europe, where he would spend the next two years. After a few months of travel, he settled in Berlin. While in Berlin, he was analyzed by Dr. Alexander and studied at the Berlin Psychoanalytic Institute, from which he graduated in 1930. Hendrick took some classes at the University: German, art, literature and history. I.H. also worked at the University hospital in the psychiatric ward.

Hendrick returned to Boston in 1930 and dove into a busy professional life (There is a curricula vitae from 1964 in box 43). In that year, he helped co-found the Boston Psychoanalytic Institute and was elected president (I.H. returned to the presidential role at BPI from 1946 to 1947). He was also president of the American Psychoanalytic Association at the same time. He also joined the Harvard Medical School teaching staff as an assistant in that year; he was an analyst at McLean hospital, and a consultant for the Massachusetts General Hospital.

In his eulogy, Leston Havens referred to Hendrick as a teacher of teachers. Hendrick spent thirty years, from 1934 until his retirement, at Harvard Medical School. When he did retire, he was honored as professor emeritus. In 1943, Hendrick was named chief of the Harvard Teaching Unit at the Boston Psychopathic Hospital (BPH), a position he kept until his retirement. Hendrick was also Director of Education at from 1949 until 1954.

These responsibilities were apparently not enough to keep Hendrick busy, for he held several temporary appointments as well. He was a consultant psychoanalyst at McLean Hospital; consultant in psychiatry at the MGH; lecturer at Radcliffe College; visiting professor at Duquesne University; and instructor at the Family Society of Boston, the Family Society of Philadelphia, and Smith College of Social Work.

Besides countless articles and papers, Hendrick published three books. Facts and Theories had three editions: 1934, 1939, and 1958. He also wrote Birth of an Institute, which is about the Boston Psychoanalytic Institute. This was published in 1961. Finally, he wrote Psychiatry Today in 1964.

Hendrick's personal life is less easy to catalog, as he was a very private man. He married and had three children: Bertha Jane, (called Jane), Martha, and Ives Jr. He and his wife, Marie, did not stay married. In 1953, I.H. suffered a great loss when Ives junior committed suicide at boarding school. For more details about Ives's death, see box 37.

For more in-depth information about Ives Hendrick, consult Sanford Gifford's manuscript: "Psychoanalysis, Psychotherapy and the New England Medical Scene," pages 64-140.

Summary of Contents

Series I.- Correspondence, Professional, 1930-1971

This collection begins with correspondence because Ives Hendrick was such an avid letter-writer. Thirty-nine of the fifty-seven boxes in the collection are dedicated to I.H.'s letters.

The correspondence in this series is what Hendrick's filing system referred to as professional. There is a lot of overlap between all the correspondence series, as Hendrick had friends within the profession with whom he would discuss business.

The files are arranged in alphabetical order. Most are labeled with specific names, but there are general files as well.

Series II.- Correspondence, General, 1943-1971

This series was originally divided within Hendrick's file cabinets into a 1943-1952 set, and a 1952-1971 set. As the series title indicates, these are general letters sent by or sent to Hendrick. Unlike Series I., this series is made up mostly of general files, rather than labeled with individual's names.

Series III.- Correspondence, Personal, 1902-1974

Hendrick and his mother, Bertha Hendrick, had an on-going correspondence from when I.H. was a schoolboy at camp until Mrs. Hendrick's last years. This correspondence dominates this series. I.H. and his father, Burton, also had a sizable correspondence. Like their son, Hendrick's parents kept many letters written by I.H. After their deaths, I.H. added these letters to his files.

This collection is arranged in chronological order. Often, the original files could roughly determine the dates of letters when there was no date on the letter itself.

Sub-Series III.- Bertha, Burton, and Hobart Hendrick

This sub-series contains those letters that I.H. acquired after these family members died. This correspondence contained enough letters from people other than I.H. that they warranted a separate section in order to avoid confusion. There are also many letters included from I.H., as well.

Series IV.- Scholastic, 1903-1924

Most of this series contains creative writing essays and histories written by I.H. as a child. There are also exercise notebooks and small art projects. The last two folders of the series, from 1918-1924 are from I.H.'s later high school and collegiate years.

Series V.- Teaching Records, 1925-1968

The majority of the records from this series are from Harvard: the Medical School and the Teaching Unit. There are also some from Massachusetts Mental Health. For more records from Mass. Mental Health, look in Series VI.

Some of the types of papers found are lectures, teaching outlines, student interviews, diagnostic interviews, correspondence, bibliographies, and institutional guidelines and schedules. Most of the documents are specific to I.H.'s teaching, rather than to the institution in which he taught.

Series VI.- Professional Organizations, 1940-1971

I.H. was involved in several organizations: American Psychoanalytic Association (APA), Boston Psychopathic Hospital (BPH), Southard Clinic, Massachusetts Mental Health Clinic (MMHC), Boston Psychoanalytic Society and Institute (BPSI), and more. The majority of the records in this series are from the APA. The organizations are arranged in alphabetical order, with the exception of the APA, which is boxed separately, due to its size.

Many researchers may be looking for I.H.'s records from BPSI. Due to its confidential nature, most of these records have been scheduled for destruction, as mandated by law. Series VII. does contain some of the BPSI/BPI seminars. The committee files that fell into this category that Hendrick kept are as follows:

Education, 1943-1947, 1950-1965
Membership-Training, 1952
Students, 1951-1971
Curriculum 1950-1959
BPI Faculty 1964-1971
Admissions 1948-1960, 1968-1971
Education and Review 1964-1969
Executive 1950
Training Analysts 1952, 1959, 1961-1971

Series VII. Seminars, Conferences and Symposia, 1935-1960

This series contains several seminars and conferences hosted by BPSI from the mid-1950s. There is also a conference about post-war Germany from 1945-1946. The records are arranged in alphabetical order.

Series VIII.- Manuscripts, Reprints, Discussions, 1927-1972

Hendrick's articles and manuscripts are arranged in alphabetical order. There are some samples of rough drafts for some of the more extensive projects, like Facts and Theories. There are also some unpublished manuscripts, such as "A Moment's Glimpse of the Genius of Beethoven" and "Problems of Training in Modern Psychiatry."

Part of this series deals with I.H.'s collection of other people's published writings. Originally, there were six cubic feet of these reprints. Because these were published and therefore available through other sources, the archivist chose to discard these reprints after recording the author, title and date. This index is labeled "List of Reprints Collected by I.H." and it is in box 55.

There are few discussions; they date from the 1950s and 1960s.

Series IX.- Photographs, 1913-1955

There are few photographs in this collection. They are mostly unidentified family and vacation snapshots. 22 additional photographs of Ives Hendrick have been added to this box by Dr. Gifford in November 2006. Note: A large collection of Hendrick's family photographs (box 57) received from his daughter Jane Rumsey has not yet been processed.

Series X: Biographical Materials

This collection contains memorial speeches, obituaries, and other articles and materials about Ives Hendrick. A copy of Ives Hendrick's will could also be found here.
